

Training Nuggets

Special Sauce for Leaders

April 29, 2026

WORDS OF WISDOM:

“Listening, not imitation, may be the greatest form of flattery.”

LEADERSHIP LESSONS:

Great leaders don't communicate change through presentations. They communicate it through conversations. A main message may start in a meeting, but it should be reinforced in one-on-one discussions, team check-ins, and hallway conversations. Consistency builds clarity and trust, that's what drives change.

TIPS FOR BETTER BOSSES:

Change is difficult. When change impacts people that do the work but didn't decide the direction, frustration can follow. Great leaders close this gap by explaining why the change is happening, what it means, and how it connects to the bigger picture. Increasing the amount of understanding with your team can build support and minimize resistance.

COMMUNICATION COUNTS:

Just because you said something, doesn't mean it landed with the other person. If you want better execution, check for understanding. Ask them to summarize your idea, have them walk through their next steps, and clarify expectations. Use these simple steps now to avoid miscommunications and rework in the future.

PRESENTATION POWER:

Provide the person who will introduce you with information that will set you up for a successful presentation. Let them know your background, experience, strengths, and anything else that builds your credibility. Don't forget a couple personal details too, these will help build rapport with your audience.

FEATURED WORKSHOP - NEXT LEVEL POWERPOINT (3.5 HRS)

PowerPoint is for more than just presentations. Unlock features that turn ordinary slides into dynamic learning and performance tools. Discover new ways to teach, train, and persuade that leave you saying “I didn't know PowerPoint could do that!”. Get ready for 25 tips you didn't know you needed.

